Rushden Sea Cadets give the Greenway a spring clean

Thursday 22nd April was Earth Day 2021 and so to mark the occasion a group of Sea Cadets from Rushden decided to organise a socially distanced litter-pick along the East Northamptonshire Greenway on Sunday morning – from Rushden Lakes to Asda, in the heart of Rushden.

Funded by the Heritage Lottery through the Nenescape Partnership, the Greenway is a popular location for dog walkers, runners, cyclists and families wanting to escape Rushden's busy streets and in recent years the route has been upgraded, with signposting, seating and an amazing mural in the tunnel that passes under Washbrook Road, but unfortunately there are always the selfish few that decide to leave their litter behind for others to clean up.

So, with Earth Day coming up, the Sea Cadets decided to pull on their rubber gloves, grab some refuse sacks and give the place a spring clean, and boy did they pick up a lot of rubbish – they even found a discarded microwave and an old toilet seat!

The event was organised by Ordinary Cadet Robert, as part of his Leadership module, and he was amazed at the amount of encouragement and support they received from passersby – it left the cadets with a real feeling of pride and self-worth that made it all worthwhile. Afterwards, the cadets were treated to some well-earned refreshments, thanks to Tessa from

Really Awesome Coffee – Corby (info@reallyawesomcoffee.co.uk) who sponsored the event.

Rushden Sea Cadets is open again after the recent lockdown and is actively looking for new cadets to join their group. If you know someone aged 9+ who you think might be interested, you can learn more about what they do and how to join by visiting their webpage www.sea-cadets.org/rushden or find them on Facebook @SeaCadetsRushden or Instagram @SeaCadetsRushden

Manifesto for Walking

During the pandemic, people have rediscovered the simple act of walking – the oldest, cheapest and greenest transport there is. It has allowed us to stay healthy, happy and connected to those around us.

But lots of us still struggle with narrow, cluttered, uneven pavements; crossings that prioritise cars rather than people; and growing numbers of speeding vehicles.

That's why I support Living Streets' Manifesto for Walking, which calls for candidates in our upcoming election to pledge to end pedestrian deaths and injuries on roads, tackle air pollution, make school streets safe and make walking easier by cutting the clutter on our pavements.

It is time we redesigned our streets around people not cars. That way we can all continue to enjoy the benefits of walking and healthier, happier communities.

GENEALOGY JOTTINGS

WORDS BY JAN PEARSON

One branch of my family came from the Essex/ Cambridgeshire border, a couple of counties that I did not know very well. Off I went and bought OS (Ordnance Survey) maps of the area as well as town plans so that I could get a better idea of where they lived. Whilst this was a good idea in itself, places do have a tendency to change over the years – towns expand and hamlets can all but disappear. If you have a look at a map of Oundle even as late as 1926, for instance, you will find a windmill at the back of Glaphthorn Road. It is long gone and houses now stand in Millfields, the name being a legacy of what was once there.

Sometimes, roads are named after major events of the time. In Peterborough, there is an Alma Road – no, not named after Alma Cogan (if your memories stretch back that far!) but after the Battle of Alma, which took place during the Crimean War.

However, there once was an Alma Road in North London. This name was changed to Harcourt Road at some point between 1929 and 1945. Therefore, if your ancestors were living in Alma Road in the 1911 census, it might be a tad difficult to find the street in the 1939 Register.

Roads are also named after people. Who were Harris Close in Raunds, Jennings Close in Higham Ferrers and William Trigg Close in Irthlingborough all named after? Maybe one of your own ancestors had a street or house named after them. There is a house called 'Wuddy's Cottage' between Ashdon and Steventon End in Essex, named after Wuddy Smith, one of my ancestors. I didn't realise that it was there until I discovered it on a visit to the area. I was rather pleased to find that!

Get those maps out and see what you can find!

WILDLIFE NEWS

WORDS BY ROY BURRELL

By the time this is printed hopefully more of the restrictions imposed against the Covid-19 virus will have gone and life will be returning to "normal" (whatever that is!). But it is unlikely that there will be no changes at all; even if nature does its usual best to cover scars in the environment, we humans are, as always, likely to take steps which are not to the general good of wildlife.

We now know, for example, that there are enough people quite prepared to disregard any advice aimed at controlling danger if it upsets their own plans. We were faced with a danger not clearly understood even by experts in the field; unfortunately it was literally lethal, able to kill not just the weak animals or plants but also otherwise fit and healthy communities.

It did not bite or itch or change colour so we could not be sure how to find and control it. It spread quickly, and many of us did not understand that danger; how could this virus be different from others like the flu virus we meet every year? But viruses do not spread in the same way as plants, with a clear life-cycle from seed through to fruit; viruses need conditions which occur much less often, and this time were so completely new that the conditions were almost too rare (apologies to the experienced virologists who now will be saying that this was far too simplified!).

This outbreak shows shockingly that in the natural world larger does not necessarily mean more dangerous. We have lived with viruses throughout history (farmers, for example, will remember the damaging effects of the foot-and-mouth episode) and have learnt to deal with them, from the largest down. Now we face the tragic deaths of probably millions of people starting from something which could fit millions onto a pinhead. Strange examples, perhaps, but a reminder that even the smallest item can be deadly; dismissing it as too tiny, ignoring any advice, could in the worst case put earthly life in danger (instead of looking for signs of life millions of miles away – like, say, Mars?).

DAIRY COMPANY OPENS NEW DEPOT IN NORTHAMPTON

McQueens Dairies Ltd, the fast growing dairy company, has opened a new distribution depot in the town and created 16 new jobs as demand for doorstep milk deliveries grows.

The family business, which specialises in doorstep milk deliveries, was founded in 1995 by company chairman Mick McQueen and his wife Meg and now operates 13 distribution depots in the north of England and Scotland and employs 700 members of staff including the couple's five children, who hold senior positions within the business.

The company has also opened new depots in Carlisle and Sheffield in 2021 as it expands across England and Scotland.

The new depot in St James Mill Business Park will serve customers living in Northampton, Milton Keynes, Bedford, Wellingborough and Rugby and will initially employ 16 staff with that number expected to increase significantly during 2021.

David Rodger, Depot Manager at McQueens Dairies said: "Our new distribution centre is ideally located to deliver fresh milk direct to customers' doorsteps in Northampton and nearby towns including Rugby, Wellingborough, Bedford, and south to Milton Keynes. We have already employed 16 new staff and expect that to increase significantly before the end of the year."

McQueens Dairies Ltd has distribution depots in Sheffield, Mansfield, Bradford, Warrington, Preston, Stockton on Tees, Carlisle, Glasgow, Edinburgh, East Kilbride, Kirkcaldy and Galashiels.

The company, which also delivers orange and apple juices, fresh eggs and alternative milk products including oat milk delivered in glass bottles, recently launched a new website – www.mcqueensdairies.co.uk – designed to give customers direct control of their orders and to allow them to make changes in advance, and to pay directly.

Ruairidh McQueen, director of McQueens Dairies added: "Over the last 25 years customers have made our business the success it is and we're delighted to have opened our latest depot and are looking forward to delivering fresh milk direct to doorsteps in Northampton and neighbouring towns."

NEW PRESIDENT FOR NORTHAMPTON MALE VOICE CHOIR

Northampton Male Voice Choir (NMVC) is delighted to announce that David Laing, recently retired Lord Lieutenant of the County, has agreed to become its President.

David and his family, who moved to Northamptonshire in 2002, have a deep interest in music and are keen supporters of the Youth Orchestra that performs with Northamptonshire Music and Performing Arts Trust at the Royal and Derngate.

The award winning male voice choir is a Registered Charity and combines making music with raising money for great causes and this is an interest that is shared by its new President. David has served as a Trustee, Chairman or President of many charities, both national and more locally, including the Northamptonshire Community Foundation, the Northamptonshire Association of Youth Clubs and Adrenaline Alley, the biggest urban sports park in the UK.

Choir Chairman, John Waller, said: "David is very enthusiastic and full of ideas. I am sure that he will make a real impact. I believe his appointment is a really positive step forward for the choir."

STRESS BUSTERS

Steady your sugar levels

"Maintaining steady blood sugar levels is key to stabilising mood. Ensure you have a small meal every 2-3 hours that contains protein (eat breakfast, lunch and dinner plus a snack mid-morning and one mid-afternoon). For example, a hard-boiled egg, 10-12 almonds, a small can of tuna and brown rice. This will stop those roller-coaster highs and cravings for sweet foods. Because your blood sugar isn't allowed to drop, your body will no longer have to ask you for a quick fix. As the blood sugar steadies, so will the mood swings – reduced adrenaline levels will automatically make you feel happier and calmer inside," says Dr Marilyn Glenville, the UK's leading nutritionist, and author of The Nutritional Health Handbook for Women (www.marilynglenville.com).

"B" happy

Certain nutrients can be very helpful in reducing stress levels, such as B vitamins, especially B5 for stress relief and energy, magnesium (nature's tranquiliser) for relaxation and sleep, chromium for blood sugar balance, L-theanine for reducing anxiety and finally Siberian Ginseng, which acts as a tonic to the adrenal glands.

Sleep your way to feeling less stressed

A good night's sleep is crucial in feeling less stressed and feeling ready to tackle your daily tasks. Stress, sleep and anxiety are all related. If we don't get enough sleep, we can find it harder to adapt to challenging situations, and when we can't cope as efficiently with stress, it can be harder to have a good night's rest.

Magnesium is known as 'nature's tranquiliser' and is needed to relax our muscles and nerves, which helps us to fall into a peaceful sleep. To ensure you're getting enough magnesium try and include plenty of magnesium-rich foods in your diet such as, pumpkin and sunflower seeds, fish and leafy green vegetables.

Still stressing? Write a to-do list

If you feel the symptoms of stress coming on, learn to get your priorities right. There is nothing in your life right now more important than your health. Learn to say no if you feel that you have taken on too much. Being assertive is invigorating and empowering. It also helps to make lists of what is, or is not a priority, and to tackle the priority tasks first. This will help give you a sense of control over your life.

Runners' High

After putting yourself through your paces and working up a sweat do you get a sense of euphoria? This is down to your endorphins. A workout places stress on your body, which activates your sympathetic nervous system by increasing levels of certain hormones such as epinephrine, norepinephrine and cortisol. These hormones increase heart rate and blood pressure, stimulate energy breakdown and inhibit immune function. To protect our body, our brain releases endorphins to fight that stress, giving us that good feeling.

Your Health - Sing your pain away!

Sounds flippant, doesn't it? Or if your singing is anything like mine it sounds blooming awful! But it works. Research last year showed that people who liked singing had a significant drop in cortisol levels after doing so.

What does that mean?

Well, cortisol is often called the stress hormone. It is released when you are under pressure and it can make your brain think your pain has got worse.

The singing research shows that if you like singing you are likely to feel less pain after singing. Currently there is no research into whether you'll feel better if you don't like singing, but let's face it, when you're in pain you'll try anything.

More importantly the research would suggest that if you are doing something you like there is a real possibility you can decrease your cortisol levels, which can then decrease your pain.

So, what do you like doing? Are you making time for your hobbies? If singing is your thing are you able to sing on your way to work? Or in the shower? Or while you make dinner?

Of course singing isn't actually going to fix an injury or cure the common cold. But if you're in pain from an injury, or worse, if you suffer from chronic pain, then this is still great news. Singing is free, needs no equipment and providing you don't have a sore throat it cannot cause any damage.

So, if you're in pain start singing if you love singing.

Dance, if you want to. Try to make sure that you're doing something that makes you feel happy to reduce your cortisol levels.

And before you ask, no, I couldn't find any research into lawnmower use and cortisol. My own experience would suggest that mowing the lawn raises stress levels and cortisol levels. So it increases pain.

Top Tip: Remember that singing uses muscles. Do a gentle bit of la la before you belt out your favourite pop song.

Have a tuneful, pain free week!

360 Play Young Minds campaign

A new initiative by 360 Play centres aims to support children and families across our communities who have been isolated throughout the pandemic, those who have lost jobs, those who have been sick or those who have struggled to cope and need a helping hand back to normality.

Passionate dad, owner and founder Duncan Phillips has pledged over £60,000 worth of tickets for children and families who have struggled through lockdown, for 360 Play centres across the country.

"As a father of two boys through lockdown and passionate about giving children the best start in life, the pandemic has had a significant impact on the younger members of our society," he said.

"Unfortunately we may only see the impacts when the world does start to return to normal but the warning signs are very clear to see."

360 Play have closely followed the child health experts throughout the pandemic and considered where they could have an impact to help children. They have also watched their own families struggle through lockdown and missing their peers.

In this campaign 360 Play are reaching out to local communities to help find out who really needs a day of carefree family fun.

It's more important now than ever that we look after our youngest generation and their developing minds. If you know someone in your community who would benefit from this, you can nominate them by contacting 360 Play.

For the first 30 days of 360 Play reopening, in stage 3 of the roadmap, they will be gifting over 50 tickets daily to the most deserving families in our communities. Friends, families, local charities or CAHMs teams can nominate families who they consider would benefit from a play date together.

Our children have struggled with isolation throughout the pandemic, all their usual social interaction with family and friends that shapes who they are has gone.

Parents have been working from home whilst home schooling and providing childcare. Babies have been born who have never met or had interaction with other babies or adults.

Research shows that the formative years are intrinsically important to a child's development and that the role of play is vital for both psychological and physical growth.

For the majority of school aged children, all of their home schooling activities and hobbies have been through screens on their televisions, iPads and computers. Screens have been used (understandably so) as virtual babysitters for younger children so parents can continue to work and we all feel the frustration of daily Zoom calls!

The 360 Play Young Minds campaign has been created by Duncan with the support of his management teams across the 360 Play centres and the backing of local MPs, children's mental health charities, local businesses and more.

CHURCH BELLS TOLLED

Local people may have heard their church's bells ringing slowly at various times between the 9th and 17th of April. They were being tolled to mark the passing of HRH Prince Phillip, the Duke of Edinburgh.

Churches across the country were involved, those in the East Northants area included: Rushden, Irthlingborough, Higham Ferrers, Oundle, Thrapston, Raunds, Great Addington, Hargrave, Ringstead, Stanwick, Woodford, Irchester, Finedon, Islip, Cotterstock and Warmington.

Some were able to toll on the day the news was announced, others on the following day. Some were able to toll again prior to the funeral itself. Tolling is the ringing of a single bell slowly, and some bells were tolled half muffled. This is when a leather pad is secured to the clapper, so that when the bell sounds it is alternately at normal volume and muffled. This makes for a particularly mournful sound. It is important to make sure that muffles don't slip, which would ruin the effect.

In normal times, bellringers would expect to ring all their bells half muffled as well as toll them solemnly. Unfortunately Covid restrictions have placed limitations on these traditions. Bell towers are usually fairly small spaces with not much in the way of ventilation. It's not always possible to maintain social distancing while ringing, so for safety's sake ringing has been largely suspended.

The Peterborough Diocesan Guild of Church Bellringers hopes to be able to start ringing bells again once restrictions mean that small groups can gather indoors, but it may be some time yet before the bells in your town or village sound out fully again.
